The recent works of Joan Leandre could be seen as 3D animations, but his Trap Interiors videos are more than that. Leandre is mixing photography with 3D animation, architecture, Sci - Fi, "H.O.M.E." and light studies. There is no linear narration, no aesthetic line or a specific style. The observer is floating through worlds, which foil his constant needs of familiarity. Leandre avoids a categorization and that is the strength of his work. Its surprising, hinting at something and it is playing with our connotations.

Leandre is considered as a silent outsider of digital media. Because he is producing little artwork and sometimes is working on his videos for more than half a year, he is shutting himself from the mechanism of the art market. Despite or even maybe for this reason his videos have a big intensity and originality.
